Legitimacy

Q1 Discuss the factors that determine legitimacy.

Legitimacy is anything that is acceptable by law. It is a political term which refers to the acceptance of a government by the citizen of a country. It is the right of their rulers to rule the country.

A government is considered legitimate, if it comes to power through constitutional means.

There are nine factors that determine legitimacy:

1. Free and fair Election :- A periodic election that is both free and fair will make a government legitimate.

2. Good Governance :- A government that rules well will earn the people's support and enjoy legitimacy.

3. Reliable and responsive leadership :- If a leader is reliable and responsive to the people, the government will be considered as legitimate.

4. custom and tradition: A legitimate government will respect the custom and tradition of a country.

5. foreign policy: Other nations of the world will be supportive and co-operative to the legitimate government.

6. Level of political participation: The people of the government determine the amount of legitimacy it enjoys.

7. Ideological beliefs: - A legitimate government will uphold the ideological beliefs of the country. Example: Liberalism in USA and conservatism in the UK.

8. Freedom of the press: - A legitimate government will grant the media in carrying out their duties in circulating information.

9. Rule of law: - A legitimate government must ensure rule of law.

Element of state

Briefly discuss the element of state.

Answer :- Generally a state has four essential elements:

1. population
2. Territory
3. Government

population :- State is a community of person. Without population there can be no state. population can be more or less but it has to be there. There are states with very small population like Canada and large populated country like China and India.

The people living in the state are the citizen of the state. They enjoy right and freedom as citizen as well as perform duties towards the state.

2. Territory :- Territory is the second essential element of state.

Territory is the physical existence of a state. It has to be definite, well-marked, and well denoted.

Territory of the state includes not only the land but also rivers, lakes, canals, inland, coastal area, mountain, hills etc. States like Russia, Canada, U.S.A, China are large sized states. On the other hand Nepal, Maldives, Bhutan are small territories.

3. Government :- Government is a group of people who rule or run the country. In other words government is a body that governs and controls the state for a given time.
